Fuel & Battery Theft

Theft of fuel is a concern for the police and rural communities. Fuel is stolen from vehicles and storage tanks using siphoning equipment that can vary from basic tubes to more sophisticated arrangements involving pumps and the cutting of fuel lines.

Batteries are also stolen from farm machinery and electric fences.

Speak to neighbouring farms. Thieves regularly operate in the same area

Keep your tank out of public view by hiding it behind fencing or defensive planting

Install a tank monitor/alarm. This will alert you to drop in fuel level

Put a lock on your tank. If possible use more than one lock

Get into the habit of regularly checking your fuel level

Things to consider:

- Wherever possible, keep vehicles and machinery in a secure area
- Consider the use of locking fuel caps
- Re-fuel vehicles just before the planned journey rather than leaving a vehicle fully fuelled overnight
- Park vehicles in areas that are well lit so they can be observed easily
- Improve lighting and focus on vulnerable areas
- Fit anti-siphoning devices
- Install or confirm that existing CCTV is fit for purpose, and that it covers tanks and vulnerable vehicles
- Consider using fuel dyes, or PAINT IT PINK for batteries
- Install cages and/or improve security that surrounds fuel storage tanks
- Consider using 'bundled' fuel tanks if your existing storage facility is not of that type
- Consider installing fuel cap alarms. More advanced systems can be linked to security lighting or can send a text message to the owners or security provider. An isolation switch allows authorised access to the tank for refuelling
- Make sure gates and compounds are locked and secure; consider fitting an anti-attack cover for the lock
- Arrange to check vehicles and premises outside of normal working hours
- Agricultural sites should consider portable refuelling systems that can be locked in secure storage areas and not left in fields or stock yards
- Use appropriate signage at the entrance where security devices are being used. This will act as a deterrent
- Consider signing up to your local Farm Watch scheme

Farm machinery, plant & vehicle theft

Theft of agricultural machinery and vehicles is a concern for the police and rural communities. Plant and vehicle theft cost businesses in the UK in excess of £30 million a year and that issue is growing all the time and in some cases the stolen vehicles are used to commit further offences.
